On the 25th of July, 1861, the Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means said: "It must be recollected that the demand on the Treasury is well nigh a million dollars a day."-Congressional Globe, extra session, 1861, p. 267. Again, on the 5th of August, 1861, ten days

"I am alarmed at the expense we are incurring. This day, and every day for some time, the nation has incurred an expense of some one million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. I can not see where the money is to come from."-Ibid., p. 448.

That, sir, was before the notion that the Constitution authorized the making of the promissory notes of the United States, or any thing else except gold and silver, a "legal tender" had ever entered the brain of any one, and before the Secretary of Treasury had compassed and devised his extraordinary scheme of a grand national paper mill for the manufacture of money by steam.

Again, the gentleman from Massachusetts, [Mr. Dawes,] who was thrust forward here the other day as the advocate to defend, upon the Treasury in his deliberate effort to underestimate the true amount of the public debt and daily expenditures of the Government, and who, by some sort of financial lergerdemain, contrived to prove them to be somewhat will not be less than $800,000,000. When, the 13th of January last, said:

"Mr. Speaker, it takes $2,000,000 every day to support the army in the field." gested, that on that particular 14th of January, or the day before or the day after, or Congressional Globe, 1861-62, p. 1577. any other one day, that was the expenditures, Central through mail..... 6:30 A. M. but "every day." And this, too, for the Army Cincinnatithrough mail..... 8:45 P. M. Springfield, Illinois..... 7:30 A. M. alone. But he proceeds: Mails Close. "One hundred millions have been expended since we met here in the beginning of December, upon an Army in repose.

Ah! indeed. Why, sir, that is at the rate of $2,380,000 a day for the preceding six weeks, with the Army "in repose." He adds: "What they will be when that great day shall arrive-if it shall ever arrive-when our eyes shall be gladdened with the sight of the Army in motion, I do not know."-Congressional Globe. 1861-2, vol. 2, p. 299.

Well, sir, our eyes were at length "gladdened with the sight of the Army in motion." The grand army of the Potomac did actually move; and yet is then of all others precisely the time which the gentleman selects for severe censure upon members on this side of Quarts and Half Gallone, the House for intimating the mere suspicion that the expenses which he could not even estimate might be seven or eight hundred thousand dollars more a day with the Army "in motion" than his own statement of the expenditure for the same army "in repose."

But he proceeds again: "Another $100,000,000 will go with this, as the $100,000,000 more I have here enumerated, outside of the daily support of the Army, have gone"-

Outside of the daily support of the Army weeks, or at the rate of $4,760,000 a day. Oh, what a "traitor" to assert it!

"Another $100,000,000, I say, must be added to this before the 4th of March! How long before the 4th of March? But $300,000,000 for full three months are $1.-200,000,000 a year; or, if he means only $200,000,000, that itself is at the rate of $800,000,000 a year for the Army alone, to say nothing of the other legitimate expenses of the Government, nor of the gigantic plunder and peculation which have disgraced it. But the gentleman from Massachusetts proceeds next in elegiac strain: BOWEN, STEWART & CO., wholesale and retail deal-bill. I am against it, first, because, in my deliberate judgment, it is wholly without con-"Sir, what it may cost to put down this rebellion, I care very little, provided it may be put down; but, sir, faith without works is dead, and stitutional warrant. Thus heavily and despairingly, on the 13th of January, the Pilgrim of Massachusetts bore upon his vicarious back the huge burden or pack of the sin of this Administration's indebtedness, as he struggled on sorrowfully in Female Diseases, and other interesting matter of the uting document. At the instance of others, if the financial Slough of Despond; what cross- most importance to the married and those contemplating what sort of a "cross" it was, at the sight of enter that state. "But with a Navy and an Army of six hundred thousand in the field, requiring, with the other expenses of the Government, an average daily expenditure of more than $1,600,000"-How much more? But at that sum alone. it equals $584,000,000-

"this new system of banking will not afford relief to the Treasury in time to enable the Secretary to meet the pressing demands that are made the barren who desire children; warranted not to injure upon him."-Congressional Globe, 1861-62, p. 524, Again, on the 4th of February, 1862, the

"This last item is at the rate of $2,000,000 per day for one hundred and fifty days. If $45,-000,000 a month is taken as the estimate, the item will be $225,000,000. But it will then reach $300,000,000, because there is an item of a hundred million nearly which will be payable at the close of the war, growing out of bounty acts, and it has been nowhere included." And estimating the entire debt to July 1. 1862, at $806,000,000, he exclaimed:

"Eight hundred and six millions! Who can credit these figures when he remembers that the world's greatest tragedian closed his bloody drama at St. Helena, leaving the public debt of France less than seventy million of pounds?" Rank dislovalty, all this! Sir, had I pre-tleman from Massachusetts would have added at least one page more to the suspicions and innundoes of his speech of the 27th of May. The gentleman from New York adds: "This enormous debt amounts, for each conressional district represented upon this floor, to $4,210,000, and when the war is ended, it will be —Congressional Globe, 1861-62. p. 687.

On the 12th of the same month, the chairman of the Committee on Finance in the Senate, the Senator from Maine, [Mr. Fessenden,] said:

"Sir we are contracting a large debt. At the end of this fiscal year, (July 1, 1862,) I suppose it will be, in round numbers, $750,000,000; and at the end of the succeeding year, if the war should continue, $1,500,000,000."—Congressional Globe, 1861-62, p. 765.

Still further, on the 19th of February, the gentleman frem New York, [Mr. Spaulding.] "One million six hundred thousand does not cover the daily expenditures."- Congressional Globe, 1861-62, p. 883. And, on the same day, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. Pike] estimated our "enormous expenditures at from one to two million dollars a day. (Congressional Globe, 1861-62. Still further, the chairman of the Committee of the Ways and Means, [Mr. Stevens.]

on the 20th of February, 1862, said: "Now, in less than a year, taking the public debt at what my colleague makes it-1 make it more-$1,200,000,000, what will the interest be special retainer, and abet the Secretary of upon it at seven and three tenths per cent., for it sional Globe, 1861-62, p. 900.

And again, on the 8th of April: "I suppose our debt on the 1st of July next less than one million dollars a day, himself, on the 13th of January last, said:

some time since, I had occasion to address the House on the Treasury note bill, I stated our expenses at $2,000,000. They are now, and have been for sometime past over three million dollars a day. It is plain, therefore, that the sum I Mark you, not as he here subsequently sug have stated will be rather below than above our ested, that on that particular 14th of Janu indebtedness at the end of this fiscal year."—

And the Senetor from Maine, [Mr. Fessenden, again, on the 30th of May, declared that, taking the old debt and the appropriations for the years 1861-62, the whole amount would reach $670,000,000, and added:

"The Senator can judge for himself whether, taking into consideration the odds and ends, unsettled claims, deficiencies, &c., which will likely to come in upon us, we shall fall short of $700. 000,000."-Congressional Globe, 1861-62, p. 2446 [Continued to-morrow.]
